SEEDLING DAHLIAS

MY OWN INTRODUCTIONS

CHARLES SHERBROOKE (Cactus)—Large incurving florets; scarlet with old gold reverse, full and free flowering on good stems. A prominent Portland grower stated that this is "the finest cactus seedling ever raised in this country." A superb novelty. Award of Merit won at National Dahlia Society exhibition 1916. Field-grown tubers $1.00 each.

OPTIMIST (Decorative)—Larger than Douzon, with colors of Geisha, varying fawn to scarlet. Stems upright, good habit and wonderfully attractive. Stock limited. Field-grown tubers $3.00.

IMPORTANT—Read "Dahlia Discounts" inside of back cover.

"The World's Finest"

WAR AND FLOWERS

"How about flowers? Does it not seem as if these beautiful ornaments were among the non-essentials to be cast aside at this time? If the world is upset is there any place for flowers? I believe that the times of stress and sorrow that lie before us need all the cheer and uplift that flowers are so well fitted to render. The delight in beautiful flowers is the only human joy which may never be carried to harmful excess, which never degrades those who partake, however freely, of its ecstasy. Did you ever hear of anyone getting drunk on a bunch of flowers? Did you ever know of a man who could not go to work the next morning because he bought a dollar's worth of flowers the night before?

"Shallow people say we must get rid of flowers now. They do not know or realize the wonderful power of these lovely messengers of comfort and cheer. They vastly under-estimate the good that flowers can do in lifting the hopes of the sick and comforting those who are sad. There will be many weary and worn soldiers returning ere long from the toil and din of the battle front. Of 100 men who go over, but two are actually killed and three badly wounded. The 95 that return are nerve-shattered and heart-sick. It is not mere sentiment alone, but an actual fact to which physicians and nurses will amply attest that flowers are a distinct therapeutic value. By all means, then, let us not destroy these efficiency builders."—J. Horace McFarland in a speech at Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14, as published by the Florists' Review.

"The Maker placed Adam and Eve in a garden. Presumably it was His intention that a garden should furnish the greatest happiness and the loveliest surroundings in this life.

We who love gardens have reason to be thankful. Gardening is relaxation. The refining and soothing effects of digging in a garden are the more keenly to be appreciated in war times because of the comparison such work affords to the echoes of the cannon and the strife of war. Nature's wholesome breath is like a benediction.

We who make gardening our hobby are glad of the broadened appreciation of our hobby brought about by the Government urging the people to plant gardens. We are proud, too, because of the happiness and contentment our new-found co-workers have discovered in growing things. Because our brothers are "over there" is no reason why we should expect the sun to stop shining, the beauties of Nature to cease, nor the songs of birds to be stilled.

Flower gardening is just as necessary in these war times as vegetable gardening. Flowers are food for the soul, stabilizers of the emotions. More than ever do we need these things now—these signs of the Maker's goodness and love

All of which leads up to the thought that it is correct and proper to plant flowers and grow beautiful things. God intended that flowers should give us cheerfulness. Was there ever a time when cheerfulness was more needed than in these days when so much is happening to unsettle our thoughts? Grow flowers! Grow more flowers! Grow still more flowers! Preach the gospel of beauty and naturalness to all about you! Allow your friends, allow your fellow men, allow even your enemies to enjoy your flowers and all will be drawn nearer to each other and to the Creator.

Gardening for flowers, for beauty, for naturalness, will never be listed as a non-essential in the lives of the American people. It is as necessary as good fresh air and sunshine."—From Garden Magazine, by Joseph J. Lane.

No flower has received more attention from hybridists and specialists in the last ten years, than the Dahlia, and truly wonderful advances in color, size, form and habit have been achieved.

It is not practicable to try out all the novelties, many of which are discarded after the second or third season, having failed to measure up to our present high standard, and so I do not claim to have the largest list of varieties, that is not my purpose, but I do claim to have one of the most up-to-date collections of high class dahlias in America, and am constantly selecting new sorts and eliminating old, in order to keep down the ever increasing list.

When unfamiliar with varieties and selection is left to me, I will give remarkable value, allowing 30 per cent discount from catalogue prices.

Prices will compare favorably with those of any other reputable grower. I am not running a "Cheap place" and do not covet that reputation, but will meet any reasonable competition.

Special prices will be quoted on large lists and your valued patronage solicited.

Prices will include free delivery.

You will be pleased with what I send you. A trial order is earnestly solicited.

HINTS ON CULTIVATION

Dahlias are easily grown, requiring no special soil, treatment or skill to bring them to perfection.

They are remarkably free from disease and have few special enemies. They succeed in partial shade.

The Dahlia is really an autumn flower and too early planting is often the cause of much disappointment.

When planted before the middle of May, they commence flowering during the hot dry months and seldom present a representative bloom, becoming exhausted before the cool damp weather in which they revel.

Dig deeply, incorporating a shovelful of well rotted stable manure, or ground blood and bone, if manure is not available, in each hill, which should be three to four feet apart.

Drive a stout stake in each hole for the support of the plant. Now lay the tuber down flat, with the eye to the stake, about four inches deep and cover one inch with pulverized soil, gradually filling to level as growth progresses.

Remember that a small tuber with a good live eye, is as good or better than a very large one, and will give greater increase in new tubers for digging.

When the plants are about six inches high, they should be tied to the stake, the ties to be adjusted as plants develop.

Too much water and fertilizer during the growing season will cause the growth to become rank, so do not treat liberally until flowering time arrives.

When frozen down in the autumn, cut stocks off at the ground and dig carefully so as not to break the neck of the tuber, for the eyes for next season's growth are only to be found where the tuber joins the stock. Store same as potatoes where they will not freeze, shrivel or rot, turning the clump upside down to drain out any superfluous sap which may sour and start decay.

DAHLIAS NOT LISTED

I have about 200 other varieties on hand and may be able to supply just what you want at an attractive price, guaranteed true-to-name. Write me about them.

Will allow 30 per cent discount if selection is left to me.

GUARANTEE

All bulbs sent out are guaranteed to grow and prove true to name. I will replace any unsatisfactory bulb, if returned in a reasonable time with original label attached.

Some are slow to sprout and should be kept in moist sand or earth, not wet, as they may rot. If kept dry after dividing, bulbs often shrivel and fail. This is one reason I do not send them out until near time to plant.

BARGAIN COLLECTIONS

For $2.00 I will send 15 of the choicest cactus, pæony, or decorative dahlias grown, or will send an assortment of the various classes, as desired. The selection of varieties to be left to me. You are at liberty to specify type or color preferred.

Very often these cheap collections are made up of inferior sorts. I do not grow any unworthy stock, but grow larger quantities of such sorts as appeal to me personally.

This surplus stock I use in these collections for advertising purposes. Greater value cannot be had from any other dealer in the business. You may be assured of this.

For $1.00 I will send 12 un-named bulbs from which the tags have been lost. These are a genuine bargain also.
